

Company Profile

The Continental Group of companies has been involved in Western Canadian electric motor repair since 1981. Robert Baker, an Alberta master electrician, had the foresight to predict a need for uncompromising services to the industrial market in Alberta. After building a large customer base in Calgary, Rob went into partnership with The Madison Group in Vancouver, bought the former Standard Electric in Edmonton and later assimilated Star Electric to the Calgary facility.

The company is comprised of three main areas of business: Electric Apparatus Repair, Engineering and Technical Services, and Field Services. This diverse service offering allows our clients to deal with one company for all their electrical equipment and services needs.

Both Calgary's 14,000 and Edmonton's 31,000 square foot shops are the largest combined facilities in Western Canada dedicated to electric motor repair. Both shops are CSA approved for explosion-proof motors and have certified operational safety programs (COR). They are fully equipped with state of the art equipment that is utilized by our dedicated staff of highly skilled motor rewind mechanics, machinists, and support personnel.

The company boasts a staff of over one hundred who together represent the best available expertise in the industry. In an ever-changing marketplace where electrical systems have become complex, delivering the best team with the latest techniques and technology is critical. Such innovative ideas include: Total Motor Management (TMM), a web-based system for assisting customers with spares inventory and critical motor management; industrial cleaning processes such as dry-ice blasting, for cleaning electronics or fin-fans on cooling towers with an environmentally friendly and non-destructive process; and nation-wide supply of electric motors and motor accessories to national and multi-national corporations.
